INTRODUCTION

THE Yearbook of American Churches has been issued under the auspices of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America since 1916, of which this is the nineteenth issue. It has been published biennially since 1933.

The Yearbook consists chiefly of directories. It also contains available statistics. The largest directory lists the religious bodies in the United States and their officers. There is also a section on Canadian Churches. The religious bodies in the United States are in general those that reported to the Bureau of the Census for the decennial Census of Religious Bodies in 1936, published in 1941, and brought up-to-date so far as is possible. Certain bodies organized since 1936 have been included.

The field organization directory contains the names of state and local cooperative agencies and their officers. For certain major denominations state officers are also given.

The section on statistics contains the latest information available on church membership and on gifts to Protestant bodies. We are grateful to the Christian Herald for supplying us with the church membership figures and to the United Stewardship Council for the information on gifts to Protestant bodies.

The Editor of the Yearbook simply collects and presents in brief form data supplied by others. Throughout the project he has received advice and aid from members of the Federal Council staff and particularly from the former Editor, Dr. Benson Y. Landis.

Samuel McCrea Cavert

ON THE surface, at least, the United States appears to be a religious country. There are about 250,000 local congregations of worshippers. More than half the population are members of a church. In round numbers, nearly five millions are Jews, nearly one million are Eastern Orthodox, twenty-five millions are Roman Catholics, forty-five millions are Protestants—a total of more than seventy-five millions who publicly profess a religious allegiance.

There has never been a time in American history when so large a percentage of the people belonged to the Churches. At the beginning of our nation's life, a little over 150 years ago, only one person in fifteen was a church member; today, more than one in two. Although the rate of increase in church membership, year by year, is not now as great as it was in earlier decades, it is still somewhat larger than the increase in population.

Those who attend public worship regularly or in other ways participate actively in the life of the Church are far fewer than those who call themselves members. Certain surveys in typical communities indicate that the company of the faithful worshipping together on any Sunday morning (except Easter) is only thirty per cent of the number on the church rolls. Any thoughtful observer would detect a disturbing discrepancy between the size of the churches and their influence on American life.

Multiplicity of Denominations

One of the first things which a visitor from abroad is likely to notice is the multiplicity of denominations in the United States. In the federal census of religious bodies in 1936, information was given concerning 256 organized groups of a national or regional character. The list is a little longer today! To Christians of the older countries of Europe this seems an amazing phenomenon. In no other part of the world is the Church divided into so many diverse denominations.

This fragmentation, however, is not quite as serious as the tabulation of 256 separate and independent bodies seems to indicate. A better perspective on the situation is gained when it is explained that 97% of all the church members of the United States are found in the fifty larger denominations, each with a membership of 50,000 or more. Two hundred of the groups listed in the census are so small that they account for less than 3% of the church membership of the nation. As a further corrective of first impressions, it may be pointed out that approximately 80% of American Protestantism is embraced within eight denominational families: Baptist, Methodist, Lutheran, Presbyterian and Reformed, Disciples, Episcopal, Congregational, Evangelical United Brethren.

The chief reason for the great diversity in religion is the great diversity of the population. The United States is almost a cross-section of the peoples of the world—more especially of the European continent. When the various migrations came from the old world to the new, they brought their religious traditions with them. All of the divisions found in all the countries of Europe were domesticated in the single nation of the United States.

To this first reason for our multiplicity of denominations was soon added to a second, viz. the strong emphasis on religious liberty. In a country in which there was no established church, in which there was no political pressure in the direction of religious conformity, in which all churches could expect equal treatment from the national government religious fecundity was encouraged. Moreover, the expansion of Christianity westward across a great continent, under pioneering conditions which placed a premium on individual initiative and independence, further stimulated the spirit of freedom and experiment.

Separation of Church and State

The religious freedom which has been characteristic of the American scene has been the expression of a different conception of the relation of Church and State than that which had prevailed in Europe. In Europe, Lutheran, Reformed and Anglican Churches were all established by law. The practice of maintaining an established church was transplanted to the American colonies but when the federal government came into being at the end of the 18th century the old church-state pattern was rejected. The religious heterogeneity of the population was too great to permit any one of the churches of the colonies to be thought of as the church of the nation.

The separation of Church and State, as we have known it in the United States, is not a separation of Christianity and citizenship. What it means is the rejection of any official interlocking between any organized religious body and the national government. The practical heart of the matter is that all churches are to be treated equally by the government, that none is to be given a favoured position by any governmental action and that each stands or falls in its own strength without either governmental support or governmental control.

When this policy was adopted it was decidedly a radical innovation. Hitherto it had been assumed that the religious solidarity of the people in a single Church officially connected with the state and therefore supported by a measure of political compulsion was necessary to the stability of the civil community. The setting aside of this tradition has been one of the most distinctive contributions of the United States to both political and religious life.

From another angle the American experiment in the separation of Church and State has had a significance that should not be overlooked. The insistence that the State may not control the Church has been a potent way of affirming that the State is not absolute. This is something of great moment as over against any totalitarian conception of government. If the Church is an independent spiritual entity, having an existence of its own apart from the State, then the State is not justified in claiming to be the only source of authority over the individual. Then there is a realm of man's life which belongs to God, not to the State, and there is a right to freedom of conscience before God which the State may not invade.

American vs European Protestants

In the course of its historical development in the United States the predominant type of Protestantism has come to be rather different from that of Europe. The type which is today most numerous across the Atlantic has represented a sharper break with the previous ecclesiastical order.

This more radical departure from the patterns of the past has had three aspects. The first and most important we have already noted in our discussion of the separation of Church and State. The second was the lesser interest in formal theological confessions and a greater emphasis on personal Christian experience. The third aspect was a reaction against any centralized authority and a great concern for the independence of the local congregation. The Churches in which these traits were marked, and which may therefore be roughly classified as belonging, ecclesiastically, to the "left wing" of Protestantism, are the Baptists, the Congregationalists, and the Disciples, together with smaller bodies like the Quakers and the Brethren. The other and older type, represented by the Lutheran, the Reformed and the Anglican bodies, may by contrast be called the "right wing." The Methodists occupy something of a middle ground, but for purposes of distinguishing between the dominant type of American Protestantism and the dominant type of European Protestantism they may be classified with the "left."

It is these Churches of the "left wing" of the Reformation which, in point of numbers, constitute the majority of American Protestants. On the other hand, it is the Churches which in their historic background represent the right wing that make up the great majority of European Protestantism. This is a factor which raises some difficult issues in ecumenical thinking and planning.

Missionary Outreach

Another characteristic of our American Christianity, as compared with the older Christianity from which it sprang, is what Europeans often call our "activism." The emphasis in the United States has been neither on the mystical side of religion nor on the theological so much as on the practical. But such adjectives as "activistic" or "practical" do not necessarily imply some lower variety of the Christian life. If instead of calling our churches "activistic" one describes this as having been strongly missionary, he has said almost the same thing.

In this connection it must be remembered that the American churches have had a great new continent to occupy in the name of Christ. When the United States began as a nation it was only a narrow strip of land on the Atlantic seaboard. As the frontier moved westward until it reached the Pacific Ocean, the churches faced an enormous missionary task in following the widely scattered settlers with the ministry of the Word and the Sacraments, the building of churches and the founding of Christian institutions. At the same time the missionary impulse was reaching out to other parts of the world, so that at the peak of effort there were as many as 14,000 American missionaries in other lands, with annual expenditures of about $40,000,000 for foreign missions.

Another thing to bear in mind is that this missionary activity, at home and abroad, was carried on without any support from the government. It was entirely a voluntary enterprise, prompted by a sense of Christian stewardship. Of this kind of "activism" there is no reason to be ashamed.

Relation to Social Life

Another way in which the practical activity of the American Churches has expressed itself is in the effort to make Christianity effective in the social and economic and political life of the nation. This has been especially noteworthy during the last forty or fifty years. It is sometimes viewed critically in two different quarters. In one quarter it is objected that the Church should confine its mission to the inner life of individuals and not try to deal with the patterns of social life and the character of civilization. To this objection the reply must be made that it is part of our Biblical faith that Christ is Lord of every realm of human life and that His Church must therefore strive to bring all social and political arrangements into obedience to His will for mankind. In another quarter it is objected that the efforts of the American churches to re-fashion social institutions according to the mind of Christ have been superficial because associated with too optimistic a view of human nature and an almost utopian trust in man's ability.

Much of this latter criticism is doubtless merited, and there is evidence that our churches have profited from it. The mood of American Christianity today is more soberly realistic. It expects no progress of mankind onward and upward in a straight line as if borne on by a sort of cosmic escalator. It is freed of the illusions of a proud and confident humanism. It is discovering the need for a deeper rootage of its social efforts in the Word of God. But the heart of the movement for translating Christianity into terms of daily social life was sound. It was a true insight into the nature of the Christian Gospel and a true leading of the Holy Spirit which has lead the American churches to challenge deep-seated social evils and to insist that every aspect of community life must be tested by the revelation of God's will in Christ. In the effort to follow Christ into the market-place, the factory, the banking house and the halls of government, American Christians have done some frontier work in public witness to the significance of Christianity for the world today.

Cooperation and Unity

Another characteristic of the American churches today is the rising concern for cooperation and ecumenical fellowship. That this concern should exist and be gaining in strength is all the more remarkable in view of our historic emphasis on freedom and diversity. Although the United States has been the scene of the greatest variety of Christian bodies, it has been a pioneer in inter-church cooperation.

During the 200 years and more while the continent was being colonized the individualistic impulses were strong; the thought and energy of the churches were given to occupying the field rather than to developing their relations with each other. Since the beginning of the 20th century, a new concern for Christian solidarity has begun. As our earlier American experience stressed the importance of Christian individuality so our more recent experience stresses the importance of Christian community.

So today there is a fuller recognition of the great central convictions of the faith which the churches hold in common. There is a clearer discernment of the common objectives which they share, of the common tasks which lie before them, and of common difficulties and perils which require their united prayer and united action. Of this new trend the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, which is now forty years old, is an expression. It embraces churches of the most vigorous Protestant testimony and also those with a fuller sense of the Catholic tradition, like the Episcopal and the Eastern Orthodox. It takes in both white and Negro churches, the latter more than a fifth of the Council's membership. Less known but probably more important than this national body are the Councils of Churches, now 700 of them, which have sprung up in local communities all over the country as channels through which neighbouring congregations draw together in a growing experience of fellowship and cooperation.

The impulse to unity is also expressing itself in efforts to go beyond cooperation and to effect the full union of denominations hitherto separate. In four decades there have been fourteen different unions—an average of one in every three years. Some of them have been of impressive proportions, such as the combining of three bodies to form the present Methodist Church, and the union of the Evangelical Church and the United Brethren. The union, apparently soon to be consummated, between the Evangelical and Reformed Church and the Congregational Christian Church (each of which is itself the product of a recent union) means that there will be a single church of nearly two million members in the place of four denominations that had a separate existence twenty years ago.

While the number of older denominations is thus being somewhat reduced, the proliferating of new denominations has not entirely ceased. Some of them have had a surprisingly rapid growth. They are largely outside of the well-recognized churches. They are ardently evangelistic and missionary, but often narrowly sectarian in outlook and in practice. They often regard all the older churches as lacking in spiritual quality and take this as a justification for proselytizing anywhere and everywhere. In the main, they are quite outside the orbit of cooperative activities and interests, unaffected by the desire of most American Christians to overcome separatist tendencies and to strengthen the bonds of Christian fellowship. Perhaps, as a discerning student has suggested, we may think of the new sects as evidence that there is still creativity and freedom in American Christianity, and of the older churches as evidence of a stage of maturity at which the values of unity and historical continuity are more fully realized.

YEARBOOK OF AMERICAN CHURCHES

A TABLE OF DATES AHEAD

The following table indicates when Easter and other important festival days occur during a period of twelve years. It also indicates the number of Sundays during Epiphany and after Pentecost for each year of the period. Easter may come as early as March 22nd or as late as April 25th, thus bringing a wide variation in the number of Sundays included in certain of the Christian seasons.

1. RELIGIOUS BODIES IN THE UNITED STATES

ADVENTIST BODIES

ADVENT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

A branch of the original Adventist group, composed of ministers and churches which withdrew from the American Millennial Association between 1854 and 1860, as a result of controversy over the question of immortality. As a corollary to their belief in conditional immortality, the group also held to the utter extinction of the wicked after the judgment. The General Conference was organized in 1860.

Churches: 466. Inclusive Membership: 32,540 (1945).

GENERAL ORGANIZATION

General Conference, biennial. (Next meeting, 1950.)

Officers: Pres. and Exec. Sec., Dr. Lee Elmore Baker, 165 Calumet Ave., Aurora, Ill.; Sec. and Treas., Dr. C. H. Hewitt, 36 Western Promenade, Providence 5, R. I.; Field Sec., Rev. C. L. Kirby.

JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES

"Jehovah's Witnesses are Christians, people not identified with any sect or denomination. They are associated with the corporations known as the Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society, Watchtower Bible & Tract Society, Incorporated, and International Bible Students Association. It was the Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society that Pastor Charles Taze Russell and others of Jehovah's Witnesses incorporated in 1884, for the advancement of Christian work and the preaching of 'this gospel of the kingdom' 'in all the world for a witness.'"

"Upon the death of Pastor Russell in 1916, Judge Joseph F. Rutherford became president of the organization and continued until January 8, 1942, at which time he finished his earthly course. He was succeeded as president of the Society by Nathan H. Knorr.

"Jehovah's Witnesses are an organized body and have groups in practically all cities throughout the United States, as well as in other parts of the world, for the purpose of regular Bible study. They do not keep a membership roll, nor do they compile any census regarding attendance at their meeting places throughout the world. Jehovah's Witnesses meet in halls or auditoriums and do not construct their own church buildings."—From a statement by the President to the Editor of the Yearbook.

THE METHODIST CHURCH

The present organization of the Methodist Church began in May, 1939, with the unification of three branches of Methodism—the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church. All three of the uniting churches were in unbroken historical connection with Methodism in America. The 1948 General Conference adopted a resolution stating that the Christmas Conference of 1784 is regarded as the date on which the organized Methodist Church was founded as an ecclesiastical organization. At this Conference, held in Lovely Lane Chapel, Baltimore, Francis Asbury and Thomas Coke were elected superintendents and a program of expansion was outlined. The Methodist movement began in England with John and Charles Wesley, leaders of an evangelical revival, and was carried to America in 1760 by Methodist emigrants from Ireland.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

The largest single body of Christians in the U. S., the Roman Catholic Church is under the spiritual leadership of His Holiness Pope Pius XII. This body dates back to the priests who accompanied Columbus on his second voyage to the New World. A settlement, later discontinued, was made at St. Augustine, Fla. The continuous history of this Church in the Colonies began at St. Mary's, in Maryland, in 1634.

Churches: 14,523. Inclusive Membership: 25,286,178 (1945).

III. STATISTICS OF ORGANIZED RELIGION

In this section are figures about Church Membership and Contributions received by religious bodies.

The figures covering Church Membership in the United States were secured by the "Christian Herald" for their August, 1948 number and these figures, together with the listing of religious bodies of 50,000 members and over, are used with the permission of the "Christian Herald."

The figures of the different bodies are not always comparable due to differing bases of computing membership. Roman Catholic, Eastern Orthodox and Protestant Episcopal figures, for example, include all baptized persons. In most Protestant bodies there are very few if any members under thirteen years of age.

GIFTS TO PROTESTANT RELIGIOUS BODIES, 1921-1948

Dr. Harry S. Myers, secretary of the United Stewardship Council, Hillsdale, Mich., has made a special compilation of total and per capita gifts to fifteen Protestant bodies for which data were published in the years 1921-1948 inclusive. (Fiscal years vary considerably, and the 1948 reports are those compiled and published that year, and are obviously not for the calendar year, 1948.)

These figures present the most comprehensive comparable information now available. The tabulation made is as follows:

THE MEANING OF AMSTERDAM, 1948, FOR THE AMERICAN CHURCHES

By Samuel McCrea Cavert

THE first assembly of the World Council of Churches held in Amsterdam, August 22, to September 4, 1948, was an unprecedented event. It meant not "just another conference" but the establishment of a permanent association of the Churches for united witness and united effort on a world-wide scale. For the first time 150 Churches, representing all of the great Christian families except the Roman Catholic, came together from 42 countries not merely to take counsel together for a brief period but to create a continuing instrument of fellowship and cooperation.

A World-Wide Church

Amsterdam means that every congregation and its members are now more fully a part of a world-wide Christian community. The Church to which one belongs is no local or national thing. It is a unit in a universal fellowship. There is, of course, a sense in which this has long been true, for the missionary movement of the last century and a half has carried the Christian message around the earth until the Church is now rooted in all the great nations. But today the world-wide Christian community has assumed a more organized and visible form than it has ever had before. Through the World Council, Churches in all continents have voluntarily come together in a permanent cooperative structure which enables them to keep in constant touch with one another and to work with one another as parts of a global fellowship.

The conception of the Church as a more-than national community has "come alive" in a practical way in the present program of mutual assistance among the Churches of the world. Through Church World Service and in other ways the American Churches are helping the Churches of Europe and Asia that have suffered most from the war. Those who receive help include fellow-Christians, like Germans, Italians and Japanese, with whose countries our own country was recently at war. The aid is not given merely on a denominational basis; the guiding principle is to help the members of the whole Christian family who stand in greatest need.

A More United Church

Amsterdam showed that we belong not only to a world-wide Church but also to a more united Church that is coming to be. The existence of the World Council of Churches does not mean that the problem of Christian unity has been solved or that the denominations lose their identity within a single Church. But they do declare their intention to cooperate with one another. The differences between the Churches remain but the differences are faced in a new way.

No longer do the differences seem the most important thing; a basic unity is discerned which is deeper than any of the things which have produced our separate ecclesiastical organizations. The development which began forty years ago in our own country when the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America was formed has now found a world-wide embodiment, transcending national and racial lines.

THE MEANING OF AMSTERDAM

In addition to the differences of national and racial backgrounds and of ecclesiastical traditions there was another difference at Amsterdam which cut across them all. It was a difference of theological perspective, as between those (chiefly European) who put their emphasis on God's action in history and transcending it, and those (chiefly representatives of the American and the Younger Churches of Asia) who put the emphasis on man's responsibility under God. One of the best things about Amsterdam was the exposure of these two characteristic outlooks to each other. The study program knit them together in the general theme, "Man's Disorder and God's Design." The subject clearly implied both the sovereign will of God as the central reality and the fateful consequences that follow when men disobey His will. The general theme was dealt with in four sub-sections:

- The Universal Church in God's Design
- The Church's Witness to God's Design
- The Church and the Social Disorder
- The Church and the International Disorder

The Church in God's Design

The report of the section on the "Universal Church in God's Design" is a competent analysis of the problems arising from our different understandings of the nature of the Church. A fundamental unity is recognized, a unity which is not our human achievement but the gift of God through Christ. Within this area of unity however, there are serious differences. The deepest difference is that which is commonly described as "catholic" versus "protestant" conceptions of the Church. The first puts the emphasis on "a visible continuity of the Church in the apostolic succession of the episcopate." The second conceives the Church as the creation of the Word of God through man's response in personal faith. A third view, brought out in the discussion, finds the continuity of the Church in a fellowship of the spirit, an "apostolic succession" based upon the abiding presence of Christ in the community that had its origin in Him.

Other differences had to do with the relation of Scripture and tradition, the nature of the ministry and the sacraments and the kind of government which the Church should have. The divergent theological viewpoints may seem rather theoretical to the average church member but patient study must be devoted to them because every Christian must be concerned not for a part of the Church but for the whole. It is expected that some of these theological issues will be dealt with in another world conference on "faith and order," probably in 1952.

But the differences which have produced separate Churches and cause their continuance are not all in the theological realm. Some of them are of a very practical character. As the report says, "We confess that pride, self-will and lovelessness have also played their part and still do so." "Worldly standards of success" and "class division" have crept into the Churches. The Body of Christ is broken by "segregation of race and color." Here are divisions within the Church which must be removed not by the work of theologians but by a deepening of the spiritual life of the rank and file of the members.

The Witness of the Church

In the report of the section on the Witness of the Church it is the evangelistic and missionary outreach which is the center of interest.

THE MEANING OF AMSTERDAM

Although the Assembly faced all the complexities of our modern civilization, it directed a large part of its attention to the simple duty of every congregation and of every Christian to bear effective testimony to the Gospel.

The witness must be borne both by word and by deed. The methods must be adapted to reaching the hearts and minds of people who are not attracted to the Church as they see it or think they see it. Strong emphasis is laid on the unconscious witness that the Church, as a Christian community, bears just by virtue of what its own life is. Those who are hungry for "community," for example, are likely to discover it only in a Church in which there is a sense of mutual responsibility of the members for one another.

One of the fresh notes is the emphasis on the role of lay men and women in their daily occupations. For most people it is suggested, their great field of witness is the place where they do their daily work, and is measured by the degree to which they function as truly Christian men and women. This is obviously true of the mother in the home. It is also true of the physician in the sick room, the teacher in the school, the employer in the factory or the worker in the labor union. Here is a conception of evangelism that calls on every Christian to have an evangelistic influence through the quality of his everyday activities.

The Church and the Social Disorder

The section which dealt with the relation of the Church to the social disorder of today had the most difficult assignment of all,—to shed such light as it could upon the attitude which Christians should take toward different economic systems. Included in the section were members from very divergent backgrounds of economic experience. The Americans generally believed that capitalism, disciplined by necessary social controls, has demonstrated its practical superiority over rival systems of our time. The Americans, however, were only a minority, perhaps a quarter of the group. Many delegates came from countries, like those of Western Europe, which are experimenting in various degrees with socialism. A few delegates came from within the Soviet orbit, though not from Russia. The report undertakes to criticize all economic systems in the light of the requirements of Christianity.

The conflict between Christianity and Marxian Communism is explained in some detail. Christianity rejects the latter because of its materialistic and deterministic philosophy, its view of morality as a class concept, its assumption that private property rather than sin is responsible for social evils, its ruthlessness and terror in dealing with dissenters from its regime, its totalitarian dictatorship over every aspect of man's life.

In the analysis of capitalism the report points out that its great emphasis on freedom tends to produce serious inequalities and also that it has not been able to prevent mass unemployment. A statement for which the report has been criticized is that "the Churches should reject the ideologies of both Communism and laissez-faire Capitalism and should seek to draw men away from the false assumption that these are the only alternatives." This statement reflects, in the main, the point of view of Christians in countries which are seeking some sort of Socialist middle-ground. Many enlightened supporters of the American economic order agree with the criticism of the "ideology of laissez-faire capitalism" when defined (as the report does define it) as the theory which "promises that justice will follow as a by-product of free enterprise." They realise that justice does not come automatically from any system but must always be struggled for.

The report makes it clear that the Socialist state, too, has its dangers. There is a warning that "centers of initiative in economic life must be so encouraged as to avoid placing too great a burden upon centralized judgment and decision." Attention is called to "economic necessities," such as the "creation of capital" and "incentives in production," which "no political system can afford to defy." Christianity, it is insisted, cannot be identified with any economic system of man's devising.

The Church and the International Disorder

The greatest contribution of the Assembly to international order and peace was the fact of its bringing Christian leaders of more than forty nations together and strengthening the sense of their unbreakable fellowship in Christ. Christians from the Western countries and from areas under Soviet domination, from Germany and the United States, from Holland and Indonesia, from China and Japan, found that at the deepest spiritual level of their lives they stood on common ground. However great the differences between them, they were aware of a common moral standard and a common point of reference by reason of their common loyalty to Christ.

All agreed that "war as a method of settling disputes is incompatible with the teaching and example of our Lord Jesus Christ." When they asked what this meant for the practical duty of Christians in concrete situations in which issues of right and justice seem to be at stake, there were three different answers. One group held that in the absence of impartial supranational institutions for the enforcement of law, the Christian has a duty to defend the law by military force, if necessary. Another group held that though a Christian may see no alternative, in certain circumstances, except to participate in war, modern warfare, with its mass destruction of innocent and guilty alike, "can never be an act of justice." A third group of Christians took the more radical view that, no matter what the circumstances, they must always refuse military service and thereby bear an absolute witness against war and for peace.

All could unite in the conclusion that the Churches in all lands must attack the causes of war, and must especially strive to find the ways by which great powers which have different economic systems can live together in the same world, with a common recognition of a moral law which all are bound to obey. The delegates could also agree in protesting, as Christians, against the totalitarian idea of the state as arrogating to itself the right to claim the final loyalty of man's conscience and to enforce a single system of economic thought on all men by suppression and intimidation.

It was in the relation of the Churches to human rights and freedoms that the greatest agreement was found. The basis for this agreement lies in the fact that "the rights of men derive directly from their Status as children of God," all of whom are equally the objects of His redemptive love. The delegates could come also to a surprising degree of agreement as to what these rights and freedoms are. There was a special interest in adequate safeguards of religion and conscience, as basic to every other freedom. The Churches were urged to teach clearly that God is Sovereign above all national sovereignties and that states must cooperate in building up the institutions through which international law is established and enforced. Specific measures for furthering the spirit and practice of cooperation were proposed, notably support of the United Nations and the agencies associated with it.

Other Concerns of the Churches

In addition to the major interests which the four Sections studied other important "concerns" were discussed in representative committees and then presented to the Assembly.

One of the most urgent of these "concerns" centered around reconstruction and inter-church aid. The impression that the period of great post-war need is over was shown to be erroneous. While in certain countries there has been a substantial recovery, other peoples, especially the German, were pictured as still in great need of material help. The unsolved problem of the millions of displaced persons and refugees also forbade any complacent view with reference to even elemental physical necessities. The emphasis, however, is now more on spiritual than on material recovery. The education of the ministry, the training of the laity for Christian work, the development of youth work, the support of Christian institutions of social work, these are tasks in which Churches of terribly depleted resources need help from fellow-Christians who have suffered relatively little from the war.

The Assembly was keenly sensitive to the problem of anti-Semitism. The report of the Committee on the Christian Approach to the Jews frankly admitted that "too often we have failed to manifest Christian love towards our Jewish neighbors or even a resolute will for common social justice," and denounced anti-Semitism, no matter what its origin, "as absolutely irreconcilable with the profession and practice of the Christian faith." The Assembly recognized that our Lord's commission to "go into all the world" and the universality of the Gospel lay upon the Church a responsibility to bear a clear witness to Christ among the Jews, as among all other people, and urged that every local parish should regard this as a part of its normal ministry.

The Assembly expressed great concern for a larger participation of the laity in all the life of the Church. It was pointed out that since 99% of the Church are lay people the vitality of the Church must chiefly depend on them. It was further pointed out that lay people, since they are in the thick of the world's activities, have the greatest opportunity to show what Christianity means for every aspect of the daily life,—economic, industrial, social, political, cultural, professional,—and to have a direct influence on the secular world.

Another subject in which there was widespread interest was the place of women in the life and work of the Church. A world-wide survey had been made of the service carried on by women in the Churches and of their status in the Churches. This provided an impressive picture of what voluntary societies of women in all the Churches are doing in teaching, in social work, in missionary service and in the deepening of the spiritual life. It was recommended that the experience of women should be more widely utilized for the central life of the Church through their inclusion in all the governing bodies where policies are made. In the case of professional workers in the church, like deaconesses and directors of religious education, it was urged that greater attention be given to improving standards of training, of remuneration and status. The question of the ordination of women was raised as something calling for careful study. The Assembly made provision for a permanent commission to give further consideration to the life and work of women in the Church.

The last official act of the Assembly was to send a "Message" to the Churches and through them to the world. Its central note is that even though dark clouds hang all around us "the world is in the hands of the living God."

AMERICAN MISSION TO LEPERS, INCORPORATED

(See Directory of Social Agencies)

NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS: 156 Fifth Avenue, Suite 1134,
New York 10, N. Y.

BRANCHES: 77 W. Washington Street, Chicago 2, Ill.; 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Mass.; 326 W. Third Street, Los Angeles 13, Calif.; 509 Burt Building, Dallas 1, Texas; 156 Fifth Avenue, Suite 520, New York 10, N. Y.

PURPOSE: to enable the medical missionaries of all Protestant Boards of Missions to care for and, when possible, to cure people with leprosy.

The Mission is the recognized auxiliary for this special ministry of all the Boards, denominational and non-denominational. These Boards, as a rule, make no appropriation for the maintenance of leprosy work but rely on the Mission for the support of their own work of this kind. The service of leprosy patients is equally physical and spiritual, the two inseparably joined as they were in the life of our Lord. The missionary leprosy colonies are Christian communities in which forsaken and lonely people find the love of God through the love of men.

THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY

450 Park Avenue, New York 22, N. Y.

The American Bible Society has as its single purpose the encouragement of the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures without note or comment, and without purpose of profit, to every man in whatever language he may require.

The American Bible Society serves hundreds of missionary societies and church bodies in the United States and abroad. Its supreme concern is to get the Bible into the hands of those who do not have it in such a manner as to secure serious interest and receptive minds.

It aids translators by counsel, supervision, and contributions toward expenses in projects continuously going on in various languages.

Long experience with skilful supervision results in the publication of readable and durable Scriptures at low cost. In recent years printing orders have reached more than ten million volumes of Gospels, Testaments, and Bibles per year. Centers of publication include London, Glasgow, Beirut, Cairo, Bangkok, Manila, Shanghai, Chengtu, and Tokyo, as well as cities in the United States.

The Society's own staff distributes hundreds of thousands of Scriptures. Many more go out through Christian workers, pastors, missionaries, and evangelists.

Efforts are made to secure a wider use of the Scriptures by various methods including a special reading campaign from Thanksgiving to Christmas and promotion of Universal Bible Sunday in the midst of that period.

The world never needed the Bible as it does today and there were never more people asking for it. If the millions of China, Latin America, and elsewhere are to get the Scriptures the American Bible Society must assume the principal responsibility.

The Society is supported by voluntary contributions and looks to the churches for its main support. Does your church give?

THE GOLDEN RULE FOUNDATION

"A People's Foundation," offers to all citizens, whether they set aside much or little for philanthropy, a service similar to that rendered by those who established their own private foundations.

"The National Stewardship Institute," the educational arm, provides research, educational programs, constructive counsel, public releases, regional and national conferences, aids in lifting the level of benevolent giving, proportionately and systematically, through channels of the donor's choice.

"The American Mothers' Committee," an accountable auxiliary, selects annually State Mothers and the National American Mother, with activities to elevate standards of the American home, eliminate juvenile delinquency and, in the spirit of the Golden Rule, enable American mothers to share many unique privileges with mothers in other lands.

Memberships, both personal, corporation and institutional, and generous contributions make possible this all-embracing philanthropic service. Privately supported church and charity, so genuinely a part of American life, as fostered by our Government, may well enlist all patriotic citizens.

MAY WE SERVE YOU?

The object for which the W.C.T.U. was formed is to unite the Christian women of the United States for the education of public sentiment to the standard of total abstinence from the use of all alcoholic liquors, to train the young in habits of sobriety and total abstinence; to secure the abolition of the traffic in alcoholic liquors; to promote good citizenship, peace, and the general welfare; to prepare and publish such newspapers, periodicals and other printed matter as may be desired by the corporation in aid of the objects of the organization, and to do all other such acts as may be necessary for the furtherance of such objects.

With a nation-wide spread of supporting Unions, an annuity contract with this 75-year-old organization is an unusually safe investment. Address Office of the Treasurer, Desk Y.
